

Just over 90 children, a hand full of mini buses, 1 blazing sun, a few fluffy clouds, a gaggle of teachers and 245 billion midgies per square foot. A wonderful day to be bitten but it did not deter the young orienteers in the lush forest of Gisburn.

A maximum of 80 minutes to complete a very testing course but everyone did and the top five teams were only separated by a few points.

Well organised by lead SSCO Ian Parker supported by fellow officers Barbara Kerr and Chris White.

The day went well if you discount the fact that the competition manager Robinson Crusoe got lost, which on reflection, was probably a bonus.
